AIMS AND SCOPE

Journal of Historical, Archaeological and Anthropological Studies (JHAAS) is a bi-annual peer-reviewed journal which focused on publishing the highest quality papers covering all aspects of history, archaeology and anthropology. This is an effort to bring out current research and ideas together on a platform that will enhance knowledge of our past cultures and seeks to explore the close links between the different disciplines. Reconstruction of history is partly dependent upon the archaeological sources which provide a vital component in the reconstruction of not only the remote past but also of the not-so-distant one. Archaeological and anthropological studies is a direct impact on society, which cannot be studied without its historical context. Even modern aspects of anthropology and archaeology jointly need to be examined in light of the social forces that have shaped them. Submissions should address issues and questions of broad interest in the archaeology of the Indian subcontinent and interpretation of new and previously reported archaeological materials. Archaeology as well as anthropology provides insights into past cultures, especially where there is a dearth of written records. The present journal is a suitable platform for the scholars of different disciplines who can examine and explore the inter-related nature of the disciplines of history, archaeology and anthropology using a holistic approach. Moreover, publication of short communications on discoveries, seminar reports, and conferences are also invited. The journal also publishes review papers from senior researchers in their respective fields of research.

Plagiarism policy: Every paper should accompany a similarity index report in Turnitin anti plagiarism software. The plagiarism percentage should not exceed 10-15% per cent (excluding 8 words). Further, it should not be more than one per cent from one source.
